Absent — Bonnen; Madden; Pickett.

The invocation was offered by Jim Mayfield, Texas Methodist Foundation, Austin, as follows:

God, bless each of the members of this house with such a deep awareness of their personal worth that they do not look to the office they hold to give their lives meaning. As they deal with the stress and pressures of public service, give each of them inner calm so they are able to respond to all that is before them out of the best that is within them. When the tensions are high, rescue them from the temptation to speak and act in ways that make matters worse rather than better. Give them compassion for those with the least power and the weakest voices in our state. Bless them with wisdom to know what is best in the long run for this state as a whole and give them the will and the courage to do it. This we ask you Lord, God, of all that was, is, and will be. Amen.

The speaker recognized Representative D. Howard who led the house in the pledges of allegiance to the United States and Texas flags.

STATEMENT BY SPEAKER CRADDICK REGARDING PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY BY REPRESENTATIVE TALTON

Last Wednesday, Representative Talton asked the following questions in the form of a parliamentary inquiry:

1. If a member doesn't want to serve on a committee because of personal, moral, or health reasons, what is the speaker's policy on that?
2. Is the speaker obligated to appoint a member to committee that was not his seniority pick but not on his preference card and without the member's consent?
3. Do the rules require the speaker to use a seniority pick for a chairman?

The chair has researched house and congressional precedent and answers the questions as follows:

1. If a member doesn't want to serve on a committee because of personal, moral, or health reasons, what is the speaker's policy on that?

Under Rule 1, Section 15, and Rule 4, Section 2, of the House Rules, the speaker is vested with the authority to appoint the membership of each committee of the house. The rules allow to submit preference cards listing their seniority and personal preferences for sitting on the committees. The chair must consider the seniority status of each member in organizing the committees. Neither of the provisions speak directly to the issue of what the speaker can or should do in the event that a member does not want to serve on a committee for "personal, moral, or health reasons," and the chair can find no relevant house or congressional precedent in which a member has vacated a committee position on personal, moral, or health grounds.

Members always have the discretion to determine the degree to which they wish to attend or participate in the committee's activities and proceedings, but failure to do so does not create a vacancy on the committee under the rules. (See Rule 4, Section 5, which addresses vacancies on committees and note that this provision has generally been interpreted to mean that a vacancy only occurs because of the death or resignation of a member.) Moreover, our rules offer no method for filling a seat on a committee that is empty because a member does not wish to serve, regardless of the reason.

2. Is the speaker obligated to appoint a member to a committee that was not his seniority pick but not on his preference card without the members's consent?

Rule 4, Section 2, of the House Rules sets out the rules by which standing membership "shall be determined." The rules provide for the appointment of members of certain committees on the basis of seniority selections. Under Rule 4, Section 2(a)(4), after these seniority selections, the rules state that "the remaining membership" shall be filled by appointment of the speaker, subject to other limitations in Chapter A of Rule 4. Among these limitations are the restrictions on the number of substantive committees each member may serve on. This limitation applies not only to the initial appointment of the committee but also the operation of the committee throughout the session and interim. In order to assure that the house operates efficiently and that each committee has the necessary number of members to do its work—in particular an odd number of members for each committee—the chair assigns each member to at least two substantive committees.

As with previous presiding officers, the chair must exercise a great deal of care and discretion in assigning members to committees, balancing the interest, experience, and needs of each member against the needs of the house as an institution. This is no easy task.

3. Do the rules require the speaker to use a seniority pick for a chairman?

Rule 4, Sections 2(a)(1)-(7) prescribe the rights of the members and duties of the chair in considering seniority for committee memberships. Nothing in these provisions requires or forbids the use of a seniority pick in designating a member to chair a committee. Indeed, it has been common practice for presiding officers to use this procedure in designating members who are selected for a committee based on seniority as chairs.
