MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the senate was received at this time (see the addendum to the daily journal, Messages from the Senate, Message No. 1).

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

REPRESENTATIVE GEREN: I just heard the senate messenger read the captions of the two senate measures passed by the senate today, and I think I heard that these measures contain provisions relating to resident homestead exemption. Is that subject matter germane to the governor's call?

SPEAKER PHELAN: The governor's call is expressly limited to cutting property taxes solely by reducing the school district maximum compressed tax rate. SB 1 and SJR 1 are not germane to the governor's call.

GEREN: What are the next steps in the house for SB 1 and SJR 1?

SPEAKER: Pursuant to the explanatory note on pages 177 and 178 of the House Rules Manual and the practice followed during the called sessions of the 87th Legislature, the house will strictly follow the provisions of the Constitution, under which the speaker reviews all bills filed with the chief clerk or coming from the senate to determine the subject matter has been submitted by the governor and admits to first reading only those measures that are covered. SB 1 and SJR 1, therefore, will not be referred to a house committee.

REMARKS ORDERED PRINTED

Representative Geren moved to print remarks between the chair and Representative Geren.

The motion prevailed.

STATEMENT OF VOTE

Ramos

REASONS FOR VOTE

Representative Bryant submitted the following reason for vote to be printed in the journal:

I voted for HB 1, the school property tax compression bill, because procedurally it became the only option available in this special session to provide taxpayers with significant property tax relief. But it is not the best way to do it and I will vote for a better option at the first opportunity.

The bill compresses (forces down) local school property taxes and replaces the resulting loss in revenue with revenue from the state, which comes mostly from state sales taxes. But sales tax revenue can decrease with fluctuations in the economy, while the funding needed for public schools does not decrease; yet no mechanism is provided in HB 1 to maintain public school funding when sales tax revenue declines. When there was a decline in 2011, the legislature reduced public school funding by $5 billion. Since Texas is already 44th in the nation (NEA Research Rankings and Estimates Report, Table C-4, 2020-21 School Year) in the state contribution to public education we can't afford to let this happen again.

Additionally, obtaining relief only through property tax compression doesn't remove the inequity in present laws: property tax rates decrease more quickly in school districts with high property value growth than in districts with lower property value growth. Further, owners of the most expensive properties will receive the most dollars at the expense of helping average Texas homeowners afford to stay in their homes. And because of prior law, compression also provides the biggest percentage reductions to those who already pay the lowest tax rates.

Additionally, property tax compression provides no relief to the 38 percent of Texas householders who rent their homes or to those who rent their place of business, unless the landlord decides to reduce the rent, which is not likely.

The right way to reduce property taxes is to dramatically and permanently increase the state's contribution to public education and to simultaneously provide additional state funding to replace local revenue lost by compressing local school tax rates. This should be accompanied by increasing homestead exemptions to make sure people get the lion's share of the savings rather than corporations. And the state should provide a proportional rebate to renters so they will also share in the property tax reductions.

Bryant, Allen, Bowers, J. González, Hinojosa, J.D. Johnson, J.E. Johnson, V. Jones, Lalani, R. Lopez, Manuel, Martinez Fischer, Meza, C. Morales, Morales Shaw, Plesa, Rosenthal, and Turner

Representative Meza submitted the following reason for vote to be printed in the journal:

I voted aye on HB 1 to provide property tax relief to my constituents and because it provides a sunset date so that the legislature may revisit it at a future time. Furthermore, I take this vote with the understanding that we will be back in Austin again soon to pass legislation to use our historic surplus to increase the basic allotment and provide raises to our Texas teachers.
