Committee Report (Amended)

DIGEST

Currently, one out of every four children in Texas can be classified as hungry--meaning they are unable to obtain the basic nourishment they need without help from public or private programs, according to a newly-released study funded by Texas A&M University. In addition, more than 70 percent of hungry Texas families are "working poor," which means families that have at least one member employed still have inadequate resources to meet all their family's food and nutrition needs.

Community gardens provide families who do not own land a place to garden. Community gardens provide families with the opportunity to grow fresh and nutritious food to supplement family incomes and increase family food security. This bill establishes a community nutrition task force and community food gardens.

PURPOSE

As proposed, S.B. 1598 establishes a community nutrition task force and community food gardens.

RULEMAKING AUTHORITY

This bill does not grant any additional rulemaking authority to a state officer, institution, or agency.
