DIGEST AND PURPOSE

The Texas Council on Purchasing from People with Disabilities (council) oversees the State Use Program, which provides for the employment of persons with disabilities in the production of products and services set aside for state procurement. More than 7,000 Texans with disabilities are employed through the State Use Program at 150 community rehabilitation programs across the state. In 2002, these individuals earned almost $24 million in wages. Recognizing the benefits of the State Use Program, the 77th Legislature made several substantive changes to strengthen the council's oversight of the State Use Program and encourage agency compliance with program requirements. As proposed, S.B. 261 would continue the council, require the council and the Texas Building and Procurement Commission to promote the State Use Program and agency compliance with program requirements, and enhance State Use Program accountability through increased oversight of the central nonprofit agency and community rehabilitation programs.
