AUTHOR'S/SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Current Texas law allows voters in eligible cities to impose a local sales and use tax dedicated to helping finance their communities' economic development projects. The economic development sales tax has become a key component of local economic development programs for communities throughout Texas. There is a need to offer a broader array of options for the use of these proceeds because different cities have different potential uses for this funding.

C.S.H.B. 2928 amends the Development Corporation Act of 1979 to allow several additional ways for eligible cities to use their local sales and use tax proceeds, depending on certain criteria set forth in the bill.

This bill does not expressly grant any additional rulemaking authority to a state officer, institution, or agency.
