AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

In the past, a large percentage the film industry's expenditures have been spent in Texas, prompting favorable economic results. Recent economic development trends among states such as New Mexico and Louisiana have included efforts to compete for the millions of dollars that can be captured for state economies by offering film production incentives. As other states have become more creative with film industry incentive packages, the number of films and television productions made in Texas has dwindled. The Texas Film Commission has tracked 29 film and television projects since 2004 which researched filming in Texas but ultimately chose to film in states offering incentives, resulting in a loss of $306 million and more than 4,100 jobs for Texas. State government agencies and entities currently inflate production rates on state property because no standard rate guidelines have been set, and in some instances state agencies and entities are unduly disallowing production shoots on state property altogether.

H.B. 374 provides an additional incentive to the film industry by offering a low-cost solution for the use of Texas state buildings and grounds for television or film production companies.

RULEMAKING AUTHORITY

This bill does not expressly grant any additional rulemaking authority to any state officer, institution, or agency.
