AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Currently, the Department of State Health Services (DSHS) does not have a formalized mental health program that is targeted to military veterans. Veterans can access mental health services through DSHS if they meet the specific requirements for the general public including income and diagnoses. However, many veterans may not have mental issues that would be covered by such services. The Veterans Administration also provides some services, but veterans are often wary of accessing treatment because they are concerned about the implications of mental health treatment on their military records and being negatively stigmatized by military peers as having a mental illness. Peer-to-peer counseling reduces the concerns about stigma or negative repercussions. Veterans can share their experiences in a supportive environment without judgment, knowing that everyone there has had similar experiences.

As proposed, S.B. 1325 directs DSHS to create a military veterans peer-to-peer mental health program to provide counseling to military veterans who suffer from mental illness.
