AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

The Public Junior College and School District Partnership Program to Provide Dropout Recovery, created by the 82nd Legislature in 2011, calls for improved coordination between independent school districts and institutions of higher education with regard to technical education. However, career and technical education that leads to industry certifications can be expensive to provide and some public junior colleges may not have the needed equipment or expertise to provide the technical coursework.

S.B. 860 affords junior colleges an additional and cost-effective resource by clarifying that participating public junior colleges may partner with public technical institutes to comply with the program's requirement to provide career and technology coursework. The bill clarifies that public technical institutes may receive a negotiated amount from the partnering public junior college for courses taught.

As proposed, S.B. 860 amends current law relating to the provision of career and technology education courses in certain partnership programs to provide high school dropout recovery.
