AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Currently, 199 of the state's 254 counties have a shortage of mental health service providers. Texas also ranks 47th out of 50 states for having an adequate number of physicians to care for its patient population. By 2030, Texas is expected to experience a shortage of approximately 40,000 to 100,000 doctors. What's more, the Department of State Health Services recently reported an imminent shortage of nurses in each license category. Collecting and analyzing data regarding the health care licensing process is critical to develop a comprehensive statewide strategy to tackle this workforce shortage.

S.B. 1636 would require the Health Professions Council to include strategies for expanding the healthcare workforce in their annual report. Specifically, the annual report would include methods for reducing the processing time for healthcare professional applications, increasing the number of practitioners providing mental and behavioral healthcare services, and any other recommendation regarding how to expand the healthcare workforce. S.B. 1636 amends current law relating to an annual report prepared by the Health Professions Council.
